Action Recommended

- Create mentoring programs where students are guided in their personal and professional development by seasoned faculty members or alumni.
- Offer extensive career services, like job placement, internships, and resume seminars, to assist students in getting ready for their future professions.
- Offer mental health and counseling services to assist students in overcoming personal and academic obstacles.

- Educate students on the significance of establishing clear, attainable learning objectives.
- The institution may want to concentrate on improving library resources and encouraging a culture of lifelong learning.

Action Taken

- After distributing a feedback form to all students, the vast majority of them felt that the curriculum was suitable for their placement in higher education. But, a few students had concerns over the course's focus on skill development and employability.
- The IQAC met to examine the student concerns, and the college staff council was supplied with the same materials for consideration and potential follow-up. It has been determined to incorporate employability, life skills, and soft skills through certificate programs and add-on courses, in addition to their curriculum.
- Beyond the theoretical classes, it has been agreed to incorporate additional practical sessions. Field tours and industrial visits of a strictly academic nature will be undertaken for this purpose. Further time for the students' extracurricular activities was also requested.
- It is requested that the departments hold additional seminars and workshops so that students can participate in more events. The career advising and placement cell has been instructed to initiate measures to increase recruitment on campus. Soon, the postgraduate departments of Malayalam, Sanskrit, and Commerce will be elevated to the status of research departments.
